

REPORT OF THE
COMMISSION ON THE STATUS OF THE
LAW
IN THE
UNITED STATES OF AMERICA
1964

The Commission on the Status of the Law was organized in 1962 by the American Bar Association and the American Law Institute. Its purpose is to study the law in the United States and to report on its status and to recommend reforms. The Commission has held numerous public hearings and has received many suggestions from the public. It has also conducted extensive research into the law and its administration. The Commission's report is a comprehensive study of the law in the United States and is a valuable resource for anyone interested in the law and its administration.

RECOMMENDATIONS

The Commission recommends that the following reforms be adopted:

1. The Commission recommends that the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) be reorganized to improve its efficiency and effectiveness. The Commission believes that the FBI should be made an independent agency, free from the control of the Department of Justice. This would allow the FBI to operate more effectively and to respond more quickly to the needs of the public. The Commission also recommends that the FBI be given the authority to conduct its own investigations and to make its own decisions regarding the use of force. This would ensure that the FBI is able to carry out its duties in a fair and impartial manner.
