J. Ravi Varma (1848–1913) was born in Kottayam, Kerala, India. He was a prominent figure in the Indian art world, known for his oil paintings and sculptures. He was the first Indian to study art in a Western country, having studied in London and Paris. His works often depicted scenes from Indian mythology and history, and he was a pioneer in the use of oil painting in India. He was also a collector of Indian art and a patron of the arts. He died in 1913 in Kottayam, Kerala, India.
